Claire of the Sea Light by Edwidge Danticat is set in the country of Haiti and demonstrates the way of life of the Haitian people. Written by someone who lives in New York but a native of Haiti, the novel is an exemplification of how one's background can influence the way they view life in general (Sontag 1). Danticat writes vividly about the life in Haiti even though she herself is a ...

Claire of the Sea Light is rich with secrets: of paternity, of sexual identity, of crimes, of lies that unfold in the course of the narrative. How do the multiple voices of the book help withhold the truth, yet also expose it at key moments? In what cases does not knowing the entire truth of a situation—such as Nozias's plan to have a vasectomy, Max Junior's love for Bernard, and Albert ...
