Adam Henson presents Adam's Farm on Countryfile from his 650-hectare farm. Having studied Agriculture at college, Adam took over Bemborough Farm from his father. The management of this 650-ha farm includes commercial sheep, wheat, spring barley and oilseed rape but also includes the UK's leading rare breed collection. Cotswold Farm Park (www.cotswoldfarmpark.co.uk) attracts over 70,000 visitors a year and also loans its sheep, cows, pigs and oxen to film sets and advertisements.

Adam gives a detailed, but very interesting account of his life on the farm in the Cotswold. Not only this he gives background information and detail on the decisions needed to be made in running not only a country park, rare breed animals, but a viable arable farm. This arable farm is the back bone of his income.

First, full disclosure, I'm a big fan of the eight minute spots entitled "Adam's Farm" on BBC's Countryfile that you can watch on Youtube. Second, I'm one of those people who is not just imagining but actively planning to start a small hobby farm. So this book hits the mark. It is basically a first person accounting of the trials and tribulations of farming in modern day Britain on a ...
