In the process, their children's intrinsic loyalty, concern, and trust are exploited." —Gregory J. Jurkovic, author of Lost Childhoods: The Plight of the Parentified Child. Two Types of Parentification. Experts have identified two distinct types of parentification: instrumental and emotional. In addition, it can be parent focused or sibling focused. Parent-focused parentification describes caregiving directed toward the parent or primary caregiver. Sibling-focused parentification ...

As discussed in Chapter 2, the consequences of children's parenting form the matrix of their parenting of the next generation. Therefore, to consider the effects of parentification is to elaborate further the context of this process. From a multilateral perspective, everyone in the parentified child's immediate and future relational systems is potentially affected. This chapter focuses ...

Jurkovic, G. J. (1997). Lost childhoods: The plight of the parentified child. Brunner/Mazel. Abstract. Growing numbers of children are being destructively parentified, sacrificing their childhoods and assuming a parental role to take care of family members and the family as a whole. This process is found in troubled families of all kinds, whether experiencing marital conflict, divorce, substance abuse, depression, violence, incest, physical or emotional disability, workaholism, or other ...
