The stories form in my mind over a period of time, and before I know it, I'm sitting down at my computer writing. Mostly, it's a matter of thinking of a crime and wondering how Sara, Jeffrey and Lena will respond. I'm also interested in seeing how the town will respond. It's very important to me that Grant County seems like a fourth narrator in the story. There are a lot of recurring ...

The Maltese Falcon was a chosen book on A Good Read (BBC Radio 4) by British crime writer Mark Billingham. He said it was the Noir/hardboiled mother lode and when I read it I knew he was right. We've all seen the movie, Bogart, 1941 but the novel has much more richness. And Sam Spade (his only outing from Hammett's pen) is a piece of work ...

I've now done it in four our of my six novels (THE SIGN and THE DEVIL'S ELIXIR are the two only-contemporary books). So it varies. I do enjoy writing the historical storylines, though, and I feel the readers really love going back in time and living through a parallel (though secondary) storyline, especially if it feels very "real," which is my aim. But in books like THE SIGN, for ...
