Peter Hibbard's book tells the richly populated story of the Bund's development from the late 1800s, when Shanghai was the West's gateway into China near the mouth of the Yangtze River. Capital investment flooded into the area (much as it is doing today). The merchant banking and trading houses went up in grand style - neo-Gothic, classic European, Art Deco - using enormous quantities of often expensive materials from China, Europe and America. And a wildly extravagant social life blossomed ...

The Bund, a stretch of historical buildings lining the western bank of the Huangpu River in Shanghai, China ("bund" derives from the Hindustani word band which means "embankment"), was initially a British settlement that at the turn of the 20 th century grew to be a collection of commercial buildings and a major financial centre. This historic riverfront, whose skyline once adorned letterheads and postcards as an icon of globalised Shanghai, fell into decline when the Communist Party ...

The Bund or Waitan is a waterfront area and a protected historical district in central Shanghai. The area centers on a section of Zhongshan Road within the former Shanghai International Settlement, which runs along the western bank of the Huangpu River in the eastern part of Huangpu District. The area along the river faces the modern skyscrapers of Lujiazui in the Pudong District. The Bund usually refers to the buildings and wharves on this section of the road, as well as some ...
