Mackinnon took this latter style to its perhaps illogical extreme, when he sailed a Mirror dinghy from Wales to the Black Sea. The Mirror is about 11 feet long, and is used primarily as a sail trainer by instructors who believe in giving students lots of strings to pull; it has a gunter mainsail, a tiny jib and a toy spinnaker. I can't imagine a less suitable vessel for a trip across Europe, but this voyage provided the material for a fascinating book. The author borrowed the little boat ...

Sandy Mackinnon, an Australian prep school master, tells the story of his epic solo voyage in a 10 1/2 foot Mirror Dinghy from Shropshire to the Black Sea and it is quite delightful. He sets off intending to spent just two weeks sailing and rowing this very small boat, named "Jack de Crow", down the Severn River - the second longest in England - but by the time he reaches the river's mouth ...
